Dr. Wong Reports from Canada

The American Academy of Cosmetic Dentistry (AACD) Annual Session was a wonderful collection of international speakers, exhibit, technical demonstrations and hands-on learning... all in a beautiful city. During my 5 days there, I participated in numerous training classes, where I learned to use some to the latest cosmetic materials. One of the composite resins had only been on the market for 2 weeks. I listened to speakers who spoke on topics such as, ozone cavity treatment, computerized fillings and the newest generation of cosmetic restoration. The ozone treatment will revolutionize dentistry as we know it. It can "cure" a cavity in 40 seconds, then a fluoride treatment would be used to repair the tooth. This process will probably be available here in the US in 2005. All in all it was a fun and worthwhile trip.

"I have always known the value and importance of looking good to one's self esteem. Before I enhanced my smile, I felt that the most important part of my attire was missing. Now I feel more fully dressed. I'm getting compliments all the time for my new smile."
